Terms of use for EPFL Library's electronic resources

The use of electronic documentation acquired by the Library is ruled by the publishers’ licensing terms and conditions.

Library users are therefore required to make fair use of the online information resources at their disposal.

Depending on the publishers or information providers these terms and conditions can be more or less restrictive; however, the following rules are generally applicable:

• access to online journals full text and other licensed materials (databases, online encyclopedias and dictionaries, e-books ... ) is restricted to authorized users, namely EPFL staff and students and Library walk-in visitors ;

• documents can be printed or saved exclusively for personal or academic use (studying, teaching, research) ;

• systematic downloading documents or data is strictly prohibited, whether automatically or manually ;

• document dissemination to third parties is not allowed, either in printed or electronic form (email or web) ;

• if the authentication is based on password login, disclosure of the password to unauthorized persons is prohibited.

Copyright law must be respected as a general rule, read the Federal Act on Copyright and Related Rights.

Users are asked to respect these rules of fair use. In case of misuse, providers reserve the right to cut off access to these resources for all the EPFL, or to sue the School for contractual breach.
